

DISPUTE RESOLUTION

EDITORIAL ADVISORS

Rachel E. Barkow

Segal Family Professor of Regulatory Law and Policy
Faculty Director, Center on the Administration of Criminal Law
New York University School of Law

Erwin Chemerinsky

Dean and Jesse H. Choper Distinguished Professor of Law
University of California, Berkeley School of Law

Richard A. Epstein

Laurence A. Tisch Professor of Law
New York University School of Law
Peter and Kirsten Bedford Senior Fellow
The Hoover Institution
Senior Lecturer in Law
The University of Chicago

Ronald J. Gilson

Charles J. Meyers Professor of Law and Business
Stanford University
Marc and Eva Stern Professor of Law and Business
Columbia Law School

James E. Krier

Earl Warren DeLano Professor of Law
The University of Michigan Law School

Tracey L. Meares

Walton Hale Hamilton Professor of Law
Director, The Justice Collaboratory
Yale Law School

Richard K. Neumann, Jr.

Alexander Bickel Professor of Law
Maurice A. Deane School of Law at Hofstra University

Robert H. Sitkoff

John L. Gray Professor of Law
Harvard Law School

David Alan Sklansky

Stanley Morrison Professor of Law
Faculty Co-Director, Stanford Criminal Justice Center
Stanford Law School

ASPEN CASEBOOK SERIES

DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Beyond the Adversarial Model

Third Edition

Carrie J. Menkel-Meadow

Chancellor's Professor of Law (and Political Science) and Founding Faculty, University of California, Irvine Law School and

A.B. Chettle Jr. Chair of Law, Dispute Resolution and Civil Procedure, Emerita
Georgetown University Law Center

Lela Porter Love

Professor of Law and Director, Kukin Program for Conflict Resolution and the Cardozo Mediation Clinic

Benjamin N. Cardozo Law School, Yeshiva University

Andrea Kupfer Schneider

Professor of Law and Director, Dispute Resolution Program
Marquette University Law School

Michael Moffitt

Philip H. Knight Chair, Professor
University of Oregon School of Law

Wolters Kluwer

Copyright © 2019 CCH Incorporated. All Rights Reserved.

Published by Wolters Kluwer in New York.

Wolters Kluwer Legal & Regulatory U.S. serves customers worldwide with CCH, Aspen Publishers, and Kluwer Law International products. (www.WKLegaledu.com)

No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopy, recording, or utilized by any information storage or retrieval system, without written permission from the publisher. For information about permissions or to request permissions online, visit us at www.WKLegaledu.com, or a written request may be faxed to our permissions department at 212-771-0803.

To contact Customer Service, e-mail customer.service@wolterskluwer.com, call 1-800-234-1660, fax 1-800-901-9075, or mail correspondence to:

Wolters Kluwer
Attn: Order Department
PO Box 990
Frederick, MD 21705

Printed in the United States of America.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0

ISBN 978-1-4548-5202-5

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Names: Menkel-Meadow, Carrie, author. | Love, Lela Porter, 1950- author. |

Schneider, Andrea Kupfer, author. | Moffitt, Michael L., 1968- author.

Title: Dispute resolution : beyond the adversarial model /

Carrie J. Menkel-Meadow, Chancellor's Professor of Law (and Political Science) and Founding Faculty, University of California, Irvine Law School and

A.B. Chettle Jr. Chair of Law, Dispute Resolution and Civil Procedure,

Emerita Georgetown University Law Center; Lela Porter Love, Professor of Law and Director,

Kukin Program for Conflict Resolution and the Cardozo Mediation

Clinic, Benjamin N. Cardozo Law School, Yeshiva University; Andrea Kupfer

Schneider, Professor of Law and Director, Dispute Resolution Program,

Marquette University Law School; Michael Moffitt, Philip H. Knight Chair,

Professor, University of Oregon School of Law.

Description: Third edition. | New York : Wolters Kluwer, [2019] | Series: Aspen casebook series

Identifiers: LCCN 2018030676 | ISBN 9781454852025

Subjects: LCSH: Dispute resolution (Law)—United States. | LCGFT: Casebooks (Law).

Classification: LCC KF9084.A75 D57 2019 | DDC 347.73/9—dc23

LC record available at <https://lccn.loc.gov/2018030676>

About Wolters Kluwer Legal & Regulatory U.S.

Wolters Kluwer Legal & Regulatory U.S. delivers expert content and solutions in the areas of law, corporate compliance, health compliance, reimbursement, and legal education. Its practical solutions help customers successfully navigate the demands of a changing environment to drive their daily activities, enhance decision quality and inspire confident outcomes.

Serving customers worldwide, its legal and regulatory portfolio includes products under the Aspen Publishers, CCH Incorporated, Kluwer Law International, ftwilliam.com and MediRegs names. They are regarded as exceptional and trusted resources for general legal and practice-specific knowledge, compliance and risk management, dynamic workflow solutions, and expert commentary.

*For Robert Meadow,
Peter Popov and Nicole Love Popov,
Rodd, Joshua, Noah, and Zachary Schneider,
Jamie, Spencer, and Sander Moffitt,*

Our partners and children whose support, love and dispute resolution talents we appreciate and cherish, and

For our many students, past, present, and future, whom we learn from and hope will use these materials to make the world a better place, with both peace and justice.

Summary of Contents

Contents	xi
Preface to the Third Edition	xxvii
Preface to the Second Edition	xxxix
Preface to the First Edition	xxxv
Acknowledgments	xli
PART I. INTRODUCTION	1
1. Introducing the Fields of Conflict and Dispute Resolution	3
2. The Lawyer as Problem Solver	43
PART II. THE BASIC PROCESSES: NEGOTIATION, MEDIATION, AND ARBITRATION	75
3. Negotiation: Concepts and Models	77
4. Negotiation: Skills and Practices	107
5. Negotiation: Law and Ethics	147
6. Mediation: Concepts and Models	185
7. Mediation: Skills and Practices	223
8. Mediation: Law, Policy, and Ethics	263
9. Arbitration: Concepts and Models	305
10. Arbitration: Law and Policy	345
11. Arbitration: Practice and Ethics	385
PART III. PROCESS PLURALISM: ADAPTATIONS AND VARIATIONS OF PROCESSES	425
12. Private and Public Hybrid Processes	427
13. Multiparty Dispute Resolution	475

14. Choosing an Appropriate Process: For Your Clients and the Future of ADR as Systems of Dispute Resolution	517
Table of Online Resources	551
Table of Principal Cases	551
Collected References	553
Index	575

Contents

Preface to the Third Edition	xxvii
Preface to the Second Edition	xxxi
Preface to the First Edition	xxxv
Acknowledgments	xli
PART I. INTRODUCTION	1
Chapter 1. Introducing the Fields of Conflict and Dispute Resolution	3
A. Theoretical Underpinnings of Conflict and Dispute Resolution	6
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Conflict Theory	6
Problem 1-1	8
Mary Parker Follett, Constructive Conflict	9
Deborah Tannen, The Argument Culture: Moving from Debate to Dialogue	10
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, The Trouble with the Adversary System in a Postmodern, Multicultural World	11
Problem 1-2	11
Problem 1-3	12
B. Frameworks for Handling Conflicts and Disputes	12
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Mothers and Fathers of Invention: The Intellectual Founders of ADR	16
Lon L. Fuller, The Forms and Limits of Adjudication	17
Martin Shapiro, Courts: A Comparative and Political Analysis	18
Problem 1-4	19

C. Institutions of Conflict and Dispute Resolution	20
Frank E.A. Sander, Varieties of Dispute Processing	21
Center for Public Resources, The ABC's of ADR: A Dispute Resolution Glossary	27
D. Animating Values for Conflict and Dispute Resolution: Of Peace and Justice	33
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Whose Dispute Is It Anyway? A Philosophical and Democratic Defense of Settlement (In Some Cases)	34
Owen M. Fiss, Against Settlement	36
Michael Moffitt, Three Things to be Against ("Settlement" Not Included)	38
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Practicing "In the Interests of Justice" in the Twenty-First Century: Pursuing Peace and Justice	40
Further Reading	42
Chapter 2. The Lawyer as Problem Solver	43
Problem 2-1	44
A. The Client/Lawyer Relationship	44
Jeffrey Z. Rubin & Frank E.A. Sander, When Should We Use Agents? Direct vs. Representative Negotiation	45
Problem 2-2	46
Scott R. Peppet, Six Principles for Using Negotiating Agents To Maximum Advantage	46
Problem 2-3	50
Problem 2-4	51
Jean R. Sternlight, Lawyerless Dispute Resolution: Rethinking a Paradigm	51
B. Client-Centered and Problem-Solving Approaches	53
Katherine R. Kruse, Beyond Cardboard Clients in Legal Ethics	54
Problem 2-5	55
Warren Lehman, The Pursuit of a Client's Interest	56
Problem 2-6	57
C. Discovering the Clients' Interests through Interviewing	57
Jean R. Sternlight & Jennifer Robbennolt, Good Lawyers Should Be Good Psychologists: Insights for Interviewing and Counseling Clients	58
Marjorie C. Aaron, Client Science: Advice for Lawyers on Initial Client Interviews	61
Stefan H. Krieger & Richard K. Neumann, Jr., Essential Lawyering Skills: Interviewing, Counseling, Negotiation, and Persuasive Fact Analysis	65

Problem 2-7	70
Problem 2-8	73
Further Reading	74
PART II. THE BASIC PROCESSES: NEGOTIATION, MEDIATION, AND ARBITRATION	75
Chapter 3. Negotiation: Concepts and Models	77
Problem 3-1	80
Problem 3-2	81
A. Choosing Among Negotiation Approaches	82
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Toward Another View of Legal Negotiation: The Structure of Problem Solving	82
B. Orientation and Approaches to Negotiation	84
Problem 3-3	85
1. Competitive Bargaining	86
Gary Goodpaster, A Primer on Competitive Bargaining	86
2. Accommodating Approaches to Negotiation	86
Donald G. Gifford, A Context-Based Theory of Strategy Selection in Legal Negotiation	87
Problem 3-4	88
Problem 3-5	88
3. Integrative or Problem-Solving Negotiation	89
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Toward Another View of Legal Negotiation: The Structure of Problem Solving	90
Roger Fisher, William Ury & Bruce Patton, Getting to YES	93
Problem 3-6	96
C. Choosing in Context	96
Andrea Kupfer Schneider & David Kupfer, Smart & Savvy: Negotiation Strategies in Academia	96
Andrea Kupfer Schneider, Shattering Negotiation Myths: Empirical Evidence on the Effectiveness of Negotiation Style	101
Problem 3-7	102
Jonathan R. Cohen, Adversaries? Partners? How About Counterparts? On Metaphors in the Practice and Teaching of Negotiation and Dispute Resolution	103
Problem 3-8	104
Further Reading	104
Chapter 4. Negotiation: Skills and Practice	107
A. Assertiveness	108
1. Knowledge Is Knowing How to Set Your Goals and Your Limits — or Bottom Line — in a Negotiation	109
a. Set Your Goals	109
G. Richard Shell, Bargaining for Advantage: Negotiation Strategies for Reasonable People	109

Problem 4-1	112
b. Set Your Limits	112
Russell Korobkin, A Positive Theory of Legal Negotiation	113
Problem 4-2	115
Problem 4-3	115
c. Using Appeals to Justice, Fairness, & Criteria	116
Cecilia Albin, The Role of Fairness in Negotiations	116
Problem 4-4	119
Problem 4-5	120
d. Not Getting Stuck — Common Negotiation Errors	120
Problem 4-6	120
Problem 4-7	121
Problem 4-8	121
2. Assertiveness Requires Persuasive Speaking Skills	122
Problem 4-9	124
Douglas Stone, Bruce Patton & Sheila Heen, Difficult Conversations: How to Discuss What Matters Most	124
B. Working with the Other Side	126
Andrea Kupfer Schneider & David Kupfer, Smart & Savvy: Negotiation Strategies in Academia	126
Roger Fisher, Elizabeth Kopelman & Andrea Schneider, Beyond Machiavelli: Tools for Coping with Conflict	127
C. Creativity and Flexibility	129
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Aha? Is Creativity Possible in Legal Problem Solving and Teachable in Legal Education	130
Jennifer Gerarda Brown, Creativity and Problem-Solving	132
Robert C. Bordone & Michael Moffitt, Create Value Out Of Conflict	137
D. Social Intuition	141
Andrea Kupfer Schneider & Noam Ebner, Social Intuition	141
Problem 4-10	143
Problem 4-11	143
Jeffrey Z. Rubin & Frank E.A. Sander, Culture, Negotiation, and the Eye of the Beholder	144
Problem 4-12	145
Further Reading	145
Chapter 5. Negotiation: Law and Ethics	147
A. Building a Reputation	147
G. Richard Shell, Bargaining for Advantage: Negotiation Strategies for Reasonable People	147
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, What's Fair in Negotiation? What Is Ethics in Negotiation?	151

Rebecca Hollander-Blumoff & Tom R. Tyler, Procedural Justice in Negotiation: Procedural Fairness, Outcome Acceptance, and Integrative Potential	153
Peter Reilly, Was Machiavelli Right? Lying In Negotiation And The Art Of Defensive Self-Help	154
B. Why Does Unethical Behavior Happen (Anyway)	157
James J. White, Machiavelli and the Bar: Ethical Limitations on Lying in Negotiation	157
Problem 5-1	158
Art Hinshaw, Peter Reilly & Andrea Kupfer Schneider, Attorneys and Negotiation Ethics: A Material Misunderstanding?	159
Patrick J. Schlitz, On Being a Happy, Healthy and Ethical Member of an Unhappy, Unhealthy, and Unethical Profession	163
Problem 5-2	165
Problem 5-3	165
C. Ethical Rules	166
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Ethics, Morality and Professional Responsibility in Negotiation	168
Problem 5-4	171
Problem 5-5	171
D. The Common Law of Ethics	172
1. Misrepresentation	173
Stare v. Tate	173
Problem 5-6	175
2. Omissions	175
G. Richard Shell, Bargaining for Advantage: Negotiation Strategies for Reasonable People	175
Problem 5-7	176
3. Material Facts	177
Vulcan Metals Co. v. Simmons Manufacturing Co.	178
Problem 5-8	179
Beavers v. Lamplighters Realty	179
Problem 5-9	180
E. Additional Law Regarding Settlements	181
1. Duty to Inform and Gain Approval of Settlements	181
2. Keeping the Terms of Settlements Confidential	181
Problem 5-10	182
3. Enforcement of Settlements	182
Further Reading	183
Chapter 6. Mediation: Concepts and Models	185
A. Introduction to Mediation	185
1. What Is Mediation?	185
2. Comparing Adjudication and Consensus-based Processes	186
3. The Advantages of Mediation	187

a. Settlement: Avoiding the Expense, Delay, and Risk of Adjudication; Benefits to Courts	187
b. Participation and Self-Determination: Giving Parties Voice and Choice	188
c. Better Outcomes: Generating Creative Problem Solving	189
d. Relationship, Community, and Harmony: Building Bridges Between People	190
Problem 6-1	190
Problem 6-2	191
4. The History of the U.S. Mediation Movement	191
a. Roots	191
b. Labor	192
c. Community	192
d. Family	193
e. Civil Cases	193
f. Online Mediation	193
g. Other Arenas	194
5. Mediation's Core Values	194
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Introduction	194
Problem 6-3	195
Lon L. Fuller, Mediation — Its Forms and Functions	196
Problem 6-4	198
Problem 6-5	198
6. Mediation's Place in the Justice System	198
Lela P. Love, Images of Justice	198
Problem 6-6	200
Problem 6-7	200
Robert A. Baruch Bush, Mediation and Adjudication, Dispute Resolution and Ideology: An Imaginary Conversation	200
Problem 6-8	204
Problem 6-9	205
B. Examples of Mediations	205
1. Sisters of the Precious Blood and Bristol-Myers	205
Frank J. Scardilli, Sisters of the Precious Blood v. Bristol-Myers Co.: A Shareholder-Management Dispute	205
Problem 6-10	208
2. Glen Cove	209
Lela P. Love, Glen Cove: Mediation Achieves What Litigation Cannot	209
Problem 6-11	211
Problem 6-12	212
C. Approaches to Mediation	212
1. Narrow or Broad Problem Definition, Evaluative or Facilitative	212
Leonard L. Riskin, Mediator Orientations, Strategies and Techniques	212

Problem 6-13	215
2. Facilitative Mediation: Problem-Solving, Understanding-Based, or Transformative	215
a. Problem-Solving Approach	215
b. Understanding-Based Model	215
Gary Friedman & Jack Himmelstein, Challenging Conflict: Mediation Through Understanding	215
c. Transformative Model	216
Robert A. Baruch Bush & Joseph P. Folger, The Promise of Mediation: The Transformative Approach to Conflict	216
3. Directive and Evaluative Mediation	218
a. Trashing and Bashing	218
b. Norm-educating and Norm-advocating	218
c. Community-enhancing and Community-enabling	218
Problem 6-14	219
4. Transparency about Approaches	219
D. Trends: The Future of Mediation in the Legal Arena	220
1. Challenges Ahead	220
a. The Demise of Party Participation and a Broad Problem-Definition in Court Contexts	220
b. Mediator Conduct	221
2. The Promise of Mediation	222
Further Reading	222
Chapter 7. Mediation: Skills and Practices	223
A. The Mediator	224
1. Mediator Traits	224
2. Mediator Tasks	224
3. Who Can Be a Mediator?	225
4. Mediator Strategies and Skills for Stages in the Mediation Process	226
a. Getting Started	226
i. Who Should Participate in the Mediation?	226
Problem 7-1	227
ii. What Procedural Issues Must Be Addressed?	228
Joseph B. Stulberg & Lela P. Love, The Middle Voice	228
iii. How Is the Stage Set?	229
Problem 7-2	230
iv. How Does the Mediator Open the Session?	230
Problem 7-3	231
b. Listening to Understand the Conflict	232
i. "Looping"	232
Gary Friedman & Jack Himmelstein, The Loop of Understanding	232
ii. Reframing	234

Lela P. Love, Training Mediators to Listen: Deconstructing Dialogue and Constructing Understanding, Agendas, and Agreements	235
Problem 7-4	239
c. Organizing the Conversation	239
Joseph B. Stulberg, The Theory and Practice of Mediation: A Reply to Professor Susskind	239
Problem 7-5	240
d. Encouraging Movement Towards Options and Agreements	241
Lela P. Love & Joseph B. Stulberg, Targets and Techniques to Generate Movement	242
Problem 7-6	244
Christopher W. Moore, The Mediation Process	244
e. Using the Caucus	245
i. Never Caucus	246
ii. Caucus Selectively	246
iii. Mostly Caucus	247
iv. Always Caucus	247
Problem 7-7	247
f. Drafting Agreements and Closing the Session	247
Problem 7-8	249
5. Other Mediator Approaches	249
B. The Attorney Representative	250
1. The Problem-Solving Perspective	251
Leonard L. Riskin, Mediation and Lawyers	251
2. Strategies and Skills of the Attorney Representative	251
a. Prescriptions for the Attorney	251
Lawrence M. Watson, Jr., Effective Advocacy in Mediation: A Planning Guide to Prepare for a Civil Trial	252
Problem 7-9	255
Jean R. Sternlight, Lawyers' Representation of Clients in Mediation: Using Economics and Psychology to Structure Advocacy in a Nonadversarial Setting	256
b. Avoiding Mistakes as a Representative in Mediation	256
Tom Arnold, 20 Common Errors in Mediation Advocacy	257
C. The Impact of Differences and Diversity	259
Problem 7-10	260
Further Reading	261
Chapter 8. Mediation: Law, Policy, and Ethics	263
A. Mediation and the Law	263
1. The Relationship Between Law and Mediation	263
a. The Law's Long Shadow	263
Problem 8-1	264
b. Informed Consent	264
Problem 8-2	265

c. Sources of “Law” and Justice	265
Problem 8-3	266
2. Litigation About Mediation	266
a. The Effect of a Duty to Mediate	267
b. The Enforceability of Mediated Agreements	267
c. Special Requirements of Mediated Agreements	268
3. Confidentiality in Mediation	268
a. Sources of Confidentiality	269
i. Common Law and Evidentiary Exclusions	269
ii. Discovery Limitations	270
iii. Contracts	271
iv. Statutory and Judicially Created Privileges	272
v. Ethical Norms	273
b. Exceptions to Confidentiality	273
i. Criminal or Quasi-Criminal Cases	273
ii. Mediation Documents	274
iii. Contract Defenses	275
Olam v. Congress Mortgage Co.	276
iv. The Terms of Settlement Agreements	278
v. Mediator Misconduct	279
vi. Other Issues Surrounding Exceptions to Confidentiality	279
c. The Uniform Mediation Act	280
Problem 8-4	282
Problem 8-5	282
d. Sanctions for Breach of Confidentiality	283
B. Four Policy Questions at the Intersection of Law, Justice, and Mediation	283
1. Mandatory Mediation	283
Roselle L. Wissler, The Effects of Mandatory Mediation: Empirical Research on the Experience of Small Claims and Common Pleas Courts	284
Trina Grillo, The Mediation Alternative: Process Dangers for Women	284
Problem 8-6	285
2. A “Good Faith” Requirement	286
a. Tests for Good Faith	287
b. Corporate Representatives and Good Faith	287
c. Is Attendance by Telephone in Good Faith?	288
d. Sanctions for Bad Faith	289
Problem 8-7	289
3. Mediator Evaluation and Assessment	290
Murray S. Levin, The Propriety of Evaluative Mediation: Concerns About the Nature and Quality of an Evaluative Opinion	290
Problem 8-8	291
Problem 8-9	292
4. Mediator Responsibility for the Quality of the Parties’ Agreement	292

Lawrence Susskind, Environmental Mediation and the Accountability Problem	293
Joseph B. Stulberg, The Theory and Practice of Mediation: A Reply to Professor Susskind	294
Problem 8-10	296
Problem 8-11	297
C. Ethics in Mediation	297
Michael Moffitt, Ten Ways to Get Sued: A Guide for Mediators	298
Problem 8-12	300
Further Reading	301
Chapter 9. Arbitration: Concepts and Models	305
A. Arbitration as a Dispute Resolution Method	307
1. Comparing Methods of Dispute Resolution	307
2. Arbitration as a “Creature of Contract”	308
Hiro N. Aragaki, Arbitration: Creature of Contract, Pillar of Procedure	309
3. Arbitration Timeline(s)	310
B. Models of Arbitration	311
1. Labor Arbitration	311
a. Grievance Arbitration	312
Eastern Associated Coal Corp. v. United Mine Workers of America	312
Vulcan Iron Works, Inc., and Intl. Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, AFL-CIO, Success Lodge No. 56	313
b. Interest Arbitration	314
Martin H. Malin, Two Models of Interest Arbitration	314
Teamsters Local 726 v. City of Markham Police Dept.	315
2. Commercial Arbitration	316
Hall Street Associates, LLC v. Mattel, Inc.	316
3. International Arbitration	317
BG Group PLC v. Republic of Argentina	318
4. Sports Arbitration	320
5. Adhesion Contracts	321
Jeff Sovern, Forced Arbitration and the Fate of the 7th Amendment	322
Problem 9-1	323
6. Nonbinding Arbitration	323
C. Arbitrators’ Powers	324
Lon L. Fuller, Collective Bargaining and the Arbitrator	324
1. Arbitrators’ Power to Determine the Meaning and Validity of Contracts and Arbitration Clauses	325
a. Who Decides Whether a Contract that Contains an Arbitration Clause is Valid?	325
b. Who Decides the Validity and Applicability of an Arbitration Clause?	326

c. Who Decides the Meaning of an Arbitration Clause?	327
Problem 9-2	328
2. Discovery, Injunctive & Provisional Relief, and Dispositive Motions	328
a. Discovery and Witnesses	328
b. Provisional and Injunctive Relief	329
Mcgill v. Citibank	329
3. Arbitrators' Awards	332
Problem 9-3	333
D. Arbitrator Selection and Identities	334
1. Number of Arbitrators	334
2. Selection Criteria for Arbitrators	336
Chavarria v. Ralphs Grocery Co.	336
3. Arbitrator Identities	338
Yves Dezaley & Bryant G. Garth, Dealing in Virtue: International Commercial Arbitration and the Construction of a Transnational
Legal Order	339
Problem 9-4	342
Problem 9-5	342
Further Reading	342
Chapter 10. Arbitration: Law and Policy	345
A. Enforcing Arbitration Clauses	345
1. Frameworks for Enforcing (or Avoiding) Arbitration	345
2. The Evolution Toward "Favoring" Arbitration	347
Wilko v. Swan	347
a. The FAA, State Courts, Interstate Commerce, and Preemption	350
3. Arbitrating Statutory Claims	352
Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp.	352
4. Arbitration, Unconscionability, Public Policy, and Other Grounds for Objections Based in State Law	355
Marmet Health Care Center, Inc. et al. v. Clayton Brown et al.	355
5. Arbitration and the Special Case of Class Action Waivers	357
AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion	357
American Express Co. et al., v. Italian Colors Restaurant et al.	361
6. Arbitration and Federal Carve-Outs	364
Epic Systems, Inc. v. Lewis	364
7. Preemption and Sovereign Immunity	371
C & L Enterprises, Inc. v. Citizen Band Potawatomi Indian
Tribe of Oklahoma	371
B. Arbitration Policy	375
1. Mandatory Pre-Dispute Arbitration Clauses	375
Consumer Financial Protection Bureau	377
Problem 10-1	377
Problem 10-2	378
Problem 10-3	378

Problem 10-4	378
Problem 10-5	378
Problem 10-6	379
Problem 10-7	379
2. Arbitration Confidentiality	379
Richard Reuben, Confidentiality in Arbitration: Beyond the Myth	379
Amy Schmitz, Untangling the Privacy Paradox in Arbitration	380
Sam Levin, Uber Accused of Silencing Women who Claim Sexual Assault by Drivers	382
Further Reading	383
Chapter 11. Arbitration: Practice and Ethics	385
A. Arbitration Agreements	385
1. Broad Scope Clauses	385
Problem 11-1	386
2. Defined or Narrow Scope Clauses	386
Cummings v. Fedex Ground Package Systems, Inc.	387
Hatemi v. M&T Bank	389
Hatemi v. M&T Bank	390
Problem 11-2	391
3. Disputes over Scope Clauses	392
4. Governing Law Clauses	392
DIRECTV v. Imburgia	393
Cape Flattery Ltd. v. Titan Maritime LLC	396
Problem 11-3	400
Problem 11-4	400
Problem 11-5	400
B. Arbitral Awards	401
1. Drafting Arbitration Awards	401
Problem 11-6	403
Problem 11-7	403
2. Enforcing Arbitral Awards	403
Problem 11-8	406
3. Challenges to Awards and Appeals	407
Pierre Roy v. Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra Society, Inc., Musicians Association Of Buffalo New York Local No. 92	408
Eastern Associated Coal Corp. v. United Mine Workers of America	410
Hall Street Associates, LLC v. Mattel, Inc.	413
Problem 11-9	415
C. Arbitration Ethics	416
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Ethics Issues in Arbitration and Related Dispute Resolution Processes: What's Happening and What's Not	416
1. Arbitral Bias and the Duty to Disclose	417

Commonwealth Coatings Corp. v. Continental Casualty Co.	418
Problem 11-10	420
2. Party-Appointed Non-Neutral Arbitrators	421
3. Arbitral Provider Ethics	421
Problem 11-11	422
4. Ethics for Attorney Representatives in Arbitration	423
5. Non-Attorney Representatives	423
Further Reading	424

PART III. PROCESS PLURALISM: ADAPTATIONS AND VARIATIONS OF PROCESSES 425

Chapter 12. Private and Public Hybrid Processes 427

A. Private Hybrids 428

1. Variations on Arbitration	428
a. Binding Offer Arbitration	428
b. Nonbinding Arbitration	430
Problem 12-1	430
2. Med-Arb	430
Lon L. Fuller, Collective Bargaining and the Arbitrator	432
Problem 12-2	433
3. The Mini-Trial	433
4. Private Judges and Juries	434
a. Private Judges	434
b. Private Juries	435
Problem 12-3	436
Problem 12-4	436
5. Dispute Resolution and Large Organizations: Ombuds	436
Problem 12-5	438
6. Online Dispute Resolution Mechanisms	438
Noam Ebner, Anita D. Bhappu, Jennifer Brown,
Kimberlee K. Kovach & Andrea Kupfer Schneider,
You've Got Agreement: Negoti@ting via Email	439
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Is ODR ADR?: Reflections of an
ADR Founder from 15th ODR Conference at the Hague	446
Problem 12-6	447

B. Public Hybrids 448

1. Mandatory Judicial Settlement Conferences	448
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, For and Against Settlement:
Uses and Abuses of the Mandatory Settlement Conference	449
Problem 12-7	452
2. Special Masters	452
Francis E. McGovern, Toward a Functional Approach
for Managing Complex Litigation	453

Problem 12-8	455
3. Disputes Involving Groups: Aggregate Claims and Class Actions	456
Deborah R. Hensler, A Glass Half Full, a Glass Half Empty: The Use of Alternative Dispute Resolution in Mass Personal Injury Litigation	457
Problem 12-9	461
Problem 12-10	461
4. The Summary Jury Trial	462
Problem 12-11	462
5. Early Neutral Evaluation	463
6. Court-Connected Mediation and Nonbinding Arbitration	464
7. Restorative Justice: ADR in Criminal Contexts	466
Marty Price, Personalizing Crime: Mediation Produces Restorative Justice for Victims and Offenders	466
Problem 12-12	470
8. Problem-Solving Courts	470
C. Concluding Thoughts on Hybrid Processes	470
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Pursuing Settlement in an Adversary Culture: A Tale of Innovation Co-opted or “The Law of ADR”	471
Problem 12-13	472
Further Reading	473
Chapter 13. Multiparty Dispute Resolution	475
A. Multiparty Dispute Processes: How Are They Different	476
1. Negotiating with More Than Two Parties: Coalitions and Groups	476
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Introduction	476
Robert H. Mnookin, Strategic Barriers to Dispute Resolution: A Comparison of Bilateral and Multilateral Negotiations	480
Leigh L. Thompson, The Mind and Heart of the Negotiator	481
Cass R. Sunstein, Deliberative Trouble? Why Groups Go to Extremes	485
Problem 13-1	487
2. Organizing and Legitimizing Group Negotiations:
New Processes and Deliberative Democracy	488
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, The Lawyer’s Role(s) in Deliberative Democracy	488
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Introduction: From Legal Disputes to Conflict Resolution and Human Problem Solving	490
Problem 13-2	491
B. Structures, Skills, and Practices for Multiparty Processes	491
James K. Sebenius, Mapping Backward: Negotiating in the Right Sequence?	492
Problem 13-3	495
Philip J. Harter, Negotiating Regulations: A Cure for Malaise	495
Problem 13-4	498

Lawrence Susskind, An Alternative to Robert's Rules of Order for Groups, Organizations, and Ad Hoc Assemblies That Want to Operate by Consensus	498
Problem 13-5	503
C. Dispute System Design: Planning and Structuring Repeated Dispute Resolution	503
William L. Ury, Jeanne M. Brett & Stephen B. Goldberg, Getting Disputes Resolved: Designing Systems to Cut the Costs of Conflict	504
Problem 13-6	507
D. Legal Issues in the Use of Consensus Building and Group Negotiations	508
Dwight Golann & Eric E. Van Loon, Legal Issues in Consensus Building	508
Further Reading	510
Appendix	511
Chapter 14. Choosing an Appropriate Process: For Your Clients and the Future of ADR as Systems of Dispute Resolution	517
A. Choosing Among Dispute Resolution Processes: Private Interests	518
1. Comparing the Processes	518
Frank E.A. Sander & Stephen B. Goldberg, Fitting the Forum to the Fuss: A User-Friendly Guide to Selecting an ADR Procedure	518
Problem 14-1	523
2. Assessing The Impact of Processes on Clients	523
Andrea Kupfer Schneider, Building a Pedagogy of Problem-Solving: Learning to Choose Among ADR Processes	523
Problem 14-2	527
3. Counseling Clients About Appropriate Processes	527
Problem 14-3	527
B. Evaluating and Assessing ADR Processes: Public Interests	528
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Dispute Resolution	529
Bobbi McAdoo, Nancy A. Welsh & Roselle L. Wissler, Institutionalization: What Do Empirical Studies Tell Us About Court Mediation	533
Problem 14-4	537
C. Future Uses of Dispute Resolution Processes: Peace and Justice Redux	537
Problem 14-5	539
Julie Macfarlane, The New Lawyer	541
Jean Sternlight, ADR Is Here: Preliminary Reflections on Where It Fits in a System of Justice	542
Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Alternative and Appropriate Dispute Resolution in Context: Formal, Informal, and Semiformal Legal Processes	544

Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Peace and Justice: Notes on the Evolution and Purposes of Legal Processes	545
Robert C. Bordone, Michael Moffitt & Frank Sander, The Next Thirty Years: Directions and Challenges	548
Problem 14-5	548
Further Reading	549
Table of Online Resources	551
Table of Principal Cases	551
Collected References	553
Index	575

Preface to the Third Edition

The fact that we are writing a preface to a third edition of our Dispute Resolution text is evidence that the field is both now a consolidated field, and also that it is continually changing, requiring new materials, updates and reconceptualizations of some aspects of the field.

As we write this, both domestic and international dispute resolution issues remain at the foreground of legal, governmental, private and diplomatic activity. Negotiation (both in public diplomatic, legal, and private business settings) continues to be one of the most important human processes of conflict resolution and transaction planning (see The Negotiator's Desk Reference, Chris Honeyman and Andrea Kupfer Schneider, eds. 2017 DRI Press). Mediation is now often required by courts before litigation may proceed, and is chosen by many parties as the process with the most party control over both process and outcome. Increasingly international tribunals (including private commercial, trade and investment and public human rights) are also promoting mediation and more universities around the world are teaching mediation as an essential part of both a legal and a general education. The authors of this text now teach with these materials across the globe. Arbitration continues to be “required” as mandatory in a wide variety of contractual settings, including consumer and employment contracts, which makes the United States an outlier in the world. This text adds brand new chapters on arbitration, as our Supreme Court continues to favor arbitral processes over a wide variety of claims against it, and we add a new arbitration expert to our collaboration—thank you Michael Moffitt!

As the foundational processes covered in this book—negotiation, mediation and arbitration—continue to be combined and altered to produce new hybrid forms of dispute resolution, some hybrids have fallen off in use (e.g., summary jury trials and mini-trials) while new ones emerge (e.g., final offer mediation) and some hybrids (e.g., ombuds) are attracting more usage in private companies and government agencies. This text continues to reflect the new uses of various dispute processes in more settings and to ask questions about the “scaling up” of dispute resolution processes in our larger legal and democratic systems. This new edition focuses on perhaps the newest and most challenging form of dispute resolution “online dispute resolution” or ODR, which offers the potential for more access to justice (now called “ATJ”), as well as introducing concerns about “digital inequality.” If Dispute Resolution (or ADR) is to continue to be “appropriate dispute resolution,” we must always be mindful of its promises to deliver justice, fairness and good quality outcomes to those who participate in the processes.

The modern lawyer (and law student studying to be a modern lawyer) needs to understand and practice the many different ways of resolving clients’ legal problems, using an ability to diagnose types of issues and problems and assessing the suitability of different processes for different kinds of legal problems and issues. The theme of “process pluralism” continues in this new version of the text, and we continue to focus on lawyers learning to counsel clients about appropriate process choices, from a perspective of knowing what each process offers, in terms of procedures used, party participation, choice, self-empowerment, creative solutions and achieving desired outcomes.

Assessment of what processes are appropriate for particular disputants, as well as for larger system choices, continue to be issues of both policy and ethics. As with our prior editions, each process is presented with a focus on skills, as well as the policy and ethical issues implicated in its use.

Any dispute resolution course works best with active participation by students in role-plays and simulations. These are available, both in the Teacher’s Manuals to the texts we have written (Dispute Resolution, Negotiation and Mediation) and available online through WoltersKluwer for those who adopt this text. Each chapter contains “problem boxes” which ask students to actively engage in the materials. These problem boxes can be used for class discussion, as well as written assignments. Dispute resolution must be “practiced” to be learned and understood.

As in prior editions, we have tried to present a variety of materials, including general jurisprudential readings, skills prescriptions and exercises, cases, empirical studies, policy questions, and professional responsibility rules and questions to think about and discuss. We have heard the pleas of users (both students and professors) and have once again, trimmed our book, to make chapters shorter and more adapted to one chapter per class and or one chapter per week of a 14-week semester. We welcome your input and are all available to discuss pedagogic choices. Our revisions of the paperback “splits” for Negotiation and Mediation will follow shortly.

★ ★ ★

Carrie, Lela and Andrea thank Michael Moffitt for joining us on this edition as he concludes his service as Dean of the University of Oregon Law School and Jean Sternlight, our esteemed colleague, leaves us to pursue her interests in arbitration in other venues. Thanks to both of them for continuing to collaborate with us on all the issues in the field. We have all shared ideas and inputs on these revised materials—adding new materials, particularly the most recent case law in arbitration, new materials in negotiation and mediation and hybrids, and removing material that is now dated, as the uses of various forms of dispute resolution become more institutionalized. We still hope for more innovation and the development of new processes, as well as evaluative work on what is or is not working now. We welcome your input.

All of us remain grateful for the institutional support we receive from our institutions: Carrie thanks the University of California Irvine Law School (and the political science department), and Georgetown University Law Center for allowing her to teach a great variety of courses on the themes of this text (including Multi-Party and Advanced Dispute Resolution, Deliberative Democracy, as well as the basics, Negotiation, Mediation and ADR). She thanks Adelina Tomova for administrative assistance and generally helpful problem solving; and Caleb Nissley and Sarah Salvini for research assistance; Hagop Nazarian, Shunya Wade, Kevin Homrighausen and Tony Boswell for continued enthusiasm in studying dispute resolution and “youthifying” an old hand. In addition, she thanks students at the University of Torino, University of Hong Kong, the Center for Transnational Legal Studies (London), Queen Mary Law School, Haifa University, Leuven University (Belgium), and the University of Melbourne, as well as many other international venues where she has been able to use these materials and explore cultural variations in the uses of human dispute resolution systems. Lela Love thanks the Kukin Program for Conflict Resolution and the Benjamin Cardozo Law School for supporting her scholarship. Her wonderful colleagues at Cardozo have been so helpful—Donna Erez-Navot, the Assistant Director of the Kukin Program and Nicole Duke, the Program’s RA. Also, Simeon Baum, Bob Collins, Brian Farkas, Tracey Frisch, Peter Halprin, Charlie Moxley, Glen Parker, Leslie Salzman, Robyn Weinstein, David Weisenfeld, Dan Weitz, and David White lend ongoing ideas and support—as well as Hal Abramson, Josh Stulberg, and Michael Tsur who come regularly to Cardozo and provide inspiration. Andrea Schneider (and the rest of us) continue to marvel at the ongoing contributions of Carrie Kratochvil who works to make all of this work come together. She is very appreciative of Marquette University Law School for its support of the Dispute Resolution Program and this book. She also thanks Ilena Telford, April Kutz, and Jad Itani for their research assistance on this edition. Michael Moffitt thanks the Appropriate Dispute Resolution Center at the University of Oregon School of Law, the Conflict and Dispute Resolution Master’s Program at the University of Oregon, and Phil and Penny Knight for their continued support of his research and teaching. He thanks his research assistants from Oregon and Harvard: Haley Banks, Christopher Dotson, Deanna Goodrich, Christopher Groesbeck, Juhi Gupta, Ayoung Kim, Chantal Guzman-Schlager, Ben Pincus, Jordan Shapiro, Austin Smith and Elise Williard.

We continue to be grateful for our many mentors, noting with this edition the passing of Frank Sander, Howard Raiffa, Thomas Schelling, and Margaret Shaw, among the the founding fathers and mothers of our field. We continue to be inspired by them—to stretch their ideas into the 21st century, finding new uses of “varieties of dispute processing.” Our students continue to inspire us and question us about when and how to use processes outside of courtrooms to resolve disputes. And, as we observe an increasingly polarized political world, both domestically and internationally, we are proud of our students, and yours, who are at the front line of using these materials to look for new ways to work together productively, across perceived differences in values and ideals.

We continue to be thankful for and indebted to John Devins at Wolters Kluwer who believes in us and this project and helps achieve “justice” in law school publishing.

We thank the Troy Froebe Group for editing and production—thanks to Lori Wood, Maxwell Donnewald and Geoffrey Lokke.

We also want to thank each other for the continuing collegial and enriching relationships we have as we negotiate the words on these pages and engage happily and productively with our wider and wonderful “ADR” community in legal education and now, the growing interest in our field around the world. Despite the difficulties in world and domestic politics, we still hope that reading and working with these materials will increase well being and peace and justice in the world.

Carrie Menkel-Meadow
Lela Porter Love
Andrea Kupfer Schneider
Michael Moffitt

August 2018

Preface to the Second Edition

Since the publication of our first edition in 2005 there has been continued growth and diversification in the “process pluralism” we have described in both the older edition and now this new edition. Increasing use is being made of negotiation, mediation, and arbitration, and creative system designers are combining these processes in new ways in varied contexts. At the international level, more and more transnational disputes, conflicts, and transactions are drawing on dispute resolution processes,¹ which we hope soon to cover in a separate book on Transnational Dispute Resolution.

Nevertheless, since our last edition, the United States has been participating in two new wars and litigation and its concomitant fees and costs have continued to climb, even while an economic recession has altered the legal landscape. With the recession we have seen more housing foreclosures, a rise in financial fraud and complex business litigation, and additional banking, housing, employment, and consumer disputes that have caused many people great personal and financial harm. There has also been a major realignment in the market for legal services.

Thus, we think the process pluralism of ADR has gained even more importance in our daily and professional lives, and remains at the core of what all law students (and lawyers) should learn as part of their basic legal education and experience. We see ADR in the courts, out of the courts in a myriad of forms, and increasingly, in areas of aggregated disputes and conflicts, within organizations and among peoples and nations, spawning the new separate field of dispute system design. We report here, in the last chapter, some of the newest empirical and other research, designed to test claims about ADR’s usefulness in our (and other) societies.

As in the first edition, we continue to center dispute resolution processes in a context of problem solving for clients, including individuals, governmental agencies, groups, private entities, organizations, corporations and nations. In order to negotiate, arbitrate, or mediate, lawyers need to understand their clients’ needs and interests and those of the other parties, so interviewing, counseling, listening, communicating, and understanding are important constituent activities of dispute resolution which are also covered in this book.

1. Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Why and How to Study Transnational Law, 1 UC Irvine L. Rev. 97 (2010).

In this new edition we have listened to our readers and students and streamlined (and shortened!) the materials we present to you. Instead of Notes and Questions, we now provide you with clearly demarcated Problems found, (somewhat ironically, in a book that is about “thinking outside of the box”) inside grey boxes, which are easy to read (if not always easy to solve). These problem boxes can be used as out-of-class thinking and homework assignments or serve as discussion points for classes, whether in large group or smaller task groups. The Teacher’s Manual for both the earlier edition (and this one too) continue to supply the largest collection of shorter role-plays and longer simulations for any ADR text, demonstrating our belief that the subjects of negotiation, mediation, arbitration, and dispute resolution generally are learned best in action where *theories in use*² can be tested for their efficacy, appropriateness, and ability to solve clients’ problems. Both this book and the companion shorter “splits” — Mediation: Practice Policy and Ethics and Negotiation: Processes for Problem Solving can be used in both classroom (survey or specialized) courses or clinical settings, both within and outside of the United States.

This new edition adds new materials, including a number of recently decided cases, primarily on arbitration issues, from the highest courts in the land, and the latest in commentary and scholarship on dispute resolution issues. We have also edited some of the classic materials from our first edition to a more manageable length.

This book is presented in several sections. We offer two introductory chapters on the history and jurisprudence of dispute processes, as well as the importance and underlying value of problem solving for clients and the skills necessary to problem-solve. Then in three separate chapters for each primary process of negotiation, mediation, and arbitration we cover concepts and models of that process, skills needed to be both representatives and third party neutrals in that process, and the ethical, legal, and policy issues that are implicated in the use of those processes. Next, we provide a section of the book examining more complex issues in dispute resolution: variations and combinations of dispute resolution processes in both private and public settings; uses of dispute resolution in multi-party and transactional settings; and insights from dispute system design and related planning for dispute resolution processes. Finally, we survey some of the issues in assessing the past uses and future possibilities of dispute resolution, both for clients and for the larger society.

★ ★ ★

All of us remain grateful to our various institutions for support as teachers, scholars, and practitioners: Georgetown University Law Center, the Center for Transnational Legal Studies, and the University of California, Irvine Law School for Carrie Menkel-Meadow, Benjamin N. Cardozo Law School and its Kukin Program for Conflict Resolution at Yeshiva University for Lela Love, Marquette University Law School and its Dispute Resolution Program for Andrea Kupfer Schneider and the University of Nevada, Las Vegas and its Saltman Center for Dispute Resolution for Jean Sternlight. We thank our deans, colleagues, and our many students who have worked with these materials and given us useful feedback.

2. Donald Schön, The Reflective Practitioner (1983).

We thank the many authors and publishers who have allowed us to reprint their materials (as formally acknowledged in the Acknowledgments). We are especially grateful to those who allowed us to use their materials without exorbitant permissions or royalty payments, in the interest of dissemination of learning and education. And we are grateful for the continued inspiration of both our intellectual mentors and seniors (a smaller group as we join the ranks of the “senior mentors” ourselves), and our enthusiastic students, many of whom want to make full-time careers in this field, which we all helped create and foster.

Individually and specifically we thank:

Carrie thanks Katherine M. Hayes (at Georgetown) and Jean Su (at UCI) for superb research assistance, manuscript preparation, and student insights; Maike Kotterba (CTLS) and Charlene Anderson (UCI) (for administrative support) and Peter Reilly, Clark Freshman, and Bob Bordone for mentees who have become true peers, colleagues, and friends in this work we all do.

Lela thanks Nicole and Peter for constant support (particularly Nicole’s technical support) and research assistants Halley Anolik and Dan Liston who did excellent work with page proofs.

Andrea (and the rest of us) thanks Carrie Kratochvil who was there at the birth of this book and has been our constant star of minding, managing, and maneuvering this edition to completion. She also thanks research assistants Erica Hayden, Erin Naipo, Amanda Tofias, Ben Scott, and Andrea Thompson for their excellent work.

Jean thanks her family for their tolerance and research assistants Kimberly DelMonico, Kathleen Wilden, and Will Thompson for their excellent work.

All of us thank Aspen Publishers (again), especially Melody Davies who started with us, helped us with kindness and appreciation, and we hope is now enjoying retirement, John Devins who manages us, Troy Froebe who manages our manuscript, Tracy Metivier for permissions and related editorial work, and Enid Zafran for indexing.

We thank our students for teaching us, our colleagues for supporting and critiquing us, and most importantly, our families who continue to not only support us, but to love us, for which we are all eternally grateful.

Finally, all of us thank each other for continuing to work, learn, and collaborate with each other — often from scattered corners of the world as we continue to spread our hopes and dreams for a more peaceful and just world.

*Carrie J. Menkel-Meadow
Lela Porter Love
Andrea Kupfer Schneider
Jean R. Sternlight*

November 2010

Preface to the First Edition

This book is inspired by our conviction that study of a variety of different processes of dispute resolution, what we here call “process pluralism,” will enable the lawyers of the future to be more creative and effective in their legal problem solving. We subtitle this book “Beyond the Adversarial Model” because we believe that while litigation, and the adversarial process that inspires it, has its place in the legal order, modern life requires additional processes that better meet the needs of parties in conflict, as well as of the larger societies within which legal and other disputes occur. We believe that these other processes will produce qualitatively better solutions, improve relationships between parties, and deliver both justice and peace, both effectively and meaningfully. We also care about efficiency, of course, but for us, that value must often bow to the others.

Two of us are of the founding generation of “alternative dispute resolution” (a field many now call “appropriate dispute resolution” or simply “dispute resolution”); the other two of us came fast behind with specialized knowledge of several of the processes we study in this book. We have all been teaching these processes for many years and thought it time to enter the field with a new textbook. (Note that we did not say “casebook,” as “cases” are not all that our field is about.) This book is organized to provide a comprehensive treatment of the field of dispute resolution, whether taught with skills components (and use of the many simulations, role-plays, and problem sets found in the Teacher’s Manual) or as a survey of the field’s theoretical, practical, ethical, legal, or policy issues.

We begin with a theoretical and historical introduction to the field of dispute and conflict resolution, introducing readers to the basic concepts and their creative developers and pointing out innovations in social and legal problem solving. Important theorist and practitioner Professor Lon Fuller, whom we call “the jurisprude of ADR,” introduces us to the idea of “process integrity” — the evaluation of each dispute resolution process for its own logic, function, purpose, and morality — a theme we follow throughout the book.

We then turn to the three foundational processes of dispute resolution: negotiation, mediation (as facilitated negotiation), and arbitration (party controlled adjudication). Each process is studied in three separate chapters. The first focuses on the concepts, frameworks, and approaches characterizing different conceptualizations of the process; another explores the skills and practices needed to conduct that process; and a third examines the legal, ethical, and policy issues the process raises. This section of the book is primarily concerned with how lawyers (whether as negotiators, mediators, representatives in mediation and arbitration, or arbitrators) can more effectively solve their clients' problems and the problems of those with whom their clients interact.

Each of these processes has become more complex, both in study and in practice, since the modern field was founded about thirty years ago. To help students cope with that complexity, we present materials for practice (role-plays and simulations are provided in the Teacher's Manual); for analysis (questions and problems are posed in the text's Notes and Questions sections, following each of the readings, drawn from law, social science, popular culture, and examples of the processes in use); and for speculation on future dispute resolution designs. Throughout these chapters, we focus on the multiple roles that lawyers can play and on the importance of the interaction, consultation, and participation lawyers should have with the parties and clients whose disputes and conflicts they are hoping to help resolve. We also suggest more active roles for parties and clients in participating with lawyers in the resolution of their own issues and problems. Our conception of these roles goes beyond what many have suggested before. We maintain that participation, empowerment, creativity, and self-determination are important values in the successful and satisfying resolution of disputes and conflicts.

Beyond the foundational processes, this book goes on to explore the sophisticated adaptations of these basic processes sometimes required by modern life. Beginning with Part III, we explore how the basic processes combine to form hybrid processes; how the addition of multiple parties and the introduction of more complex issues change our understanding of how these processes can be used; how we might anticipate and avoid disputes by using conflict resolution in transaction planning and contracts; and how international conflicts may differ from or require adaptation of the processes commonly used in domestic legal disputes.

Dispute resolution is no longer just about avoiding or settling lawsuits. It should be thought of before relationships are formed, throughout their duration, and then, if necessary, when things go bad. Since various forms of ADR have now been in use for at least three decades, we are in a position to present some important critiques of and challenges to ADR's use. A separate chapter in this text therefore asks practitioners and students to consider how the claims of dispute resolution processes in different fora can be properly assessed and evaluated. Our concluding chapter examines the issues involved in counseling clients on the most appropriate process to use to resolve their disputes and conflicts and to plan transactions.

Our goal in this book is to help you as lawyers and future lawyers to be as well educated and informed as possible about effective options for dispute resolution. From this basis, you will be better prepared to advise your clients about the many ways they can go about their dealings with others, both when putting things together and, sadly, when dealing with the consequences of relationships that fall apart.

This book is the culmination of many years of study, teaching, research, and writing by all of us, and we have many intellectual, personal, and work-related debts. We cannot begin to acknowledge all of those debts, but we would like to recognize a few.

First, our intellectual sources. In some ways, the field or “movement” of ADR is a continuation of earlier schools of legal thought, including both Legal Realism and the Legal Process school of the 1950s (see Henry M. Hart and Albert M. Sacks, The Legal Process: Basic Problems in the Making and Application of Law [1958, reissued in 1994, edited by Professors William N. Eskridge, Jr., and Philip P. Frickey]), both of which saw legal doctrine as insufficient to explain what lawyers did and how law is made, enforced, and lived. Both approaches sought to add people and processes to the study of law and its operations. The Law and Society field added empirical study of dispute processes by sociologists, anthropologists, psychologists, political scientists, and economists to the work of legal scholars, broadening the disciplinary reach of dispute processing studies during a period of both domestic and international conflict and ferment.

The 1960s and 1970s saw a tremendous explosion of legal rights, with many more laws added to the books than could easily be enforced in courts, no matter how actively managed. Those decades were further characterized by political movements that encouraged people with legal problems or issues to participate directly in the system, diminishing the involvement of professionals.

At the same time, two different schools of thought arose questioning the adequacy of lawsuits and traditional adversarialism to solve all social and legal problems. One group was concerned about finding qualitatively better solutions to conflicts and increasing parties’ participation, while the other group was more concerned about efficiency and the costs in money and time of so much litigation. These two movements coalesced at a famous conference held in 1976 — “Causes of Popular Dissatisfaction with the Administration of Justice” — and a speech delivered there by Professor Frank Sander officially launched the field of ADR. Concurrently, some of us (including the authors of this book) asked lawyers to learn to “problem solve” rather than to “beat or best the other side” in legal negotiations (Menkel-Meadow, 1984).

The study of negotiation was institutionalized as several law schools began to teach and study negotiation processes related to a variety of settings, producing a founding generation of negotiation scholars, many of whose works are cited and explored in the pages that follow. The concept of third party neutrals was added to facilitate negotiation, and two of us were early mediators when mediation found its place in the law school curriculum. The adaptation of the mediation process to legal disputes and conflicts is also chronicled in this book, with excerpts from those who founded and elaborated that field as well.

The study, practice, and teaching of first negotiation and then mediation were part of another important movement in legal education: clinical legal education, which seeks to teach law students how to behave as well as to think like lawyers. While litigation was the focus of most early clinical programs, frustration with enforcement of winning lawsuits or with the inefficacy of lawsuits to effect both individual and social change led some early clinicians to look for other methods of legal and social problem solving, all while teaching law students to understand that there are many ways to serve one's clients and solve legal problems. The clinical movement, like the study of ADR, is an "experiential" field, and we also owe intellectual debts to those, like Donald Schön and Chris Arygris, who developed, in professional education, the concepts and practices of "theories-in-use." This book elaborates theories of dispute resolution, in various forms, and asks students to put those theories into use immediately, while learning about them.

We have all been supported greatly by the institutions at which we teach, including Georgetown University Law Center (and before that UCLA); Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law/Yeshiva University; Marquette University Law School; and the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, Boyd Law School (and before that the University of Missouri-Columbia School of Law). We thank our respective deans, colleagues, and disbursers of research funds for their ample support in producing this book, and, more importantly, for encouraging our teaching, scholarship, and practice in this field. The William and Flora Hewlett Foundation has done much to support the field and indirectly supported much of the work of this book (both the publications in it and the work described therein).

We thank the many authors and their publishers whose work we have reprinted (see Acknowledgments, following this Preface). Knowledge in dispute resolution is only partially reflected in reported cases; most of what we know comes from other sources, including articles, transcripts, rules, practice manuals, and empirical studies.

Carrie thanks James Bond, Jaimie Kent, Ellen Connelly Cohen, and, especially, David Mattingly for superb research assistance, editorial work, and manuscript preparation; Rada M. Stojanovich Hayes, Carolyn Howard, Sylvia Johnson, Ronnie E. Rease, Jr., and Toni Patterson for administrative and moral support; and Anna Selden and John Showalter for masterful manuscript management and computer feats beyond the call of duty. She thanks Robert Meadow, Susan Gillig, and Vicki Jackson for being the best dispute resolution role models a professor ever had, and Peter Reilly for being the best hope for the next generation of negotiation teachers and scholars.

Lela thanks Roger Deitz, for his painstaking edits; and her wonderful research assistants, Clymer Bardsley, Malte Pendergast-Fischer, Barry Rosenhouse, Michael Stone, and Chelsea Teachout, for their cheerful and energetic contributions.

Andrea thanks her amazing administrative assistant Carrie Kratochvil (as do the rest of us for organizing us all); her research assistants Amy Koltz, Deanna Senske, Mindy Dummermuth, and Anna Coyer for their wonderful ideas and great work; and her colleague Joanne Lipo-Zovic.

Jean thanks and is grateful for the excellent research assistance of Alyson Carrel, Ann Casey, Jennifer Chierek, Michele Baron, and Mark Lyons.

We are all thankful for the wisdom, advice, guidance, and suggestions of Carol Liebman, Jennifer Gerada Brown, Michael Moffitt, Clark Freshman, and other anonymous reviewers of this book, long in birthing, and to a few more of you who ventured to teach this in page proofs and try it out.

We appreciate the Aspen team — Richard Mixter, who put us together, and Melody Davies, Elsie Starbecker, Lisa Wehrle, Elizabeth Ricklefs, Michael Gregory, Susan Boulanger, and Tracy Metivier, who kept us on track and together and worded and sewed and sold this book.

Most importantly, we want to publicly thank one another. We have been calling this “the girl” book, to mark the fact that still so few law casebooks are written by women, never mind totally written by women. (OK, so most of the authors in this edited volume are men. . . .) We hope this book will appeal to all genders, but still, we are proud that we have not only worked and played well together but that we also created life-time friendships and wonderful working relationships. We may have had some disputes (did we?), but we are proud to say that we have lived the words on these pages as we negotiated, mediated, and built consensus to bring you this book. We know this relationship will continue into many more editions (and the separate books on negotiation, mediation, and arbitration to be derived from this book).

Finally, we also want to thank our many students who worked with this book in draft and through its various stages of development. It is for you that this is written: May you all go forth and make the world a better place, using appropriate dispute processes to make more peace and justice in the world and to solve as many human problems as you possibly can.

Carrie J. Menkel-Meadow
Lela Porter Love
Andrea Kupfer Schneider
Jean R. Sternlight

October 2004

Acknowledgments

The authors wish to express their thanks to the following authors, periodicals, and publishers for their permission to reproduce materials from their publications:

- Aaron, Marjorie C., Client Science: Advise for Lawyers on Initial Client Interviews (2013). Copyright © 2013 by Marjorie C. Aaron. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Albin, Cecilia, “The Role of Fairness in Negotiations,” 9 Negot. J. 223 (1993). Copyright © 1993 by John Wiley & Sons, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Aragaki, Hiro N., “Arbitration: Creature of Contract, Pillar of Procedure,” 8 Y.B. on Arb. & Mediation 2 (2016). Copyright © 2016 by the Penn State University Dickinson School of Law. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Arnold, Tom, “20 Common Errors in Mediation Advocacy,” 13 Alternatives to the High Cost of Litig. 69 (1995). Copyright © 1995 by the CPR Institute for Dispute Resolution. Reprinted by permission of John Wiley & Sons, Inc. All rights reserved.
- Bordone Robert C., & Michael Moffitt, “Create Value Out of Conflict,” 9 Negot. 1 (2006). Copyright © 2006 by Harvard Business School Publishing. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Brown, Jennifer Gerarda, “Creativity and Problem-Solving,” 87 Marq. L. Rev. 697 (2004). Copyright © 2004 by the Marquette Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Bush, Robert A. Baruch, “Mediation and Adjudication, Dispute Resolution and Ideology: An Imaginary Conversation,” 3 J. of Contemp. Legal Issues 1 (1990). Copyright © 1990 by the Journal of Contemporary Legal Issues, University of San Diego Law School. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Cialdini, Robert, Influence: The Psychology of Persuasion (1993). Copyright © 1993 by Robert Cialdini. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc. All rights reserved.
- Cohen, Jonathan R., “Adversaries? Partners? How About Counterparts? On Metaphors in the Practice and Teaching of Negotiation and Dispute Resolution,” 20 Conflict Resol. Q. 433 (2003). Copyright © 2003 by Jossey-Bass, Inc. Reprinted by permission of John Wiley & Sons, Inc. All rights reserved.
- Dezalay, Yves, & Bryant Garth, Dealing in Virtue: International Commercial Arbitration and the Construction of a Transnational Legal Order (1996). Copyright © 1996 by the University of Chicago Press. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

- Ebner, Noam, Anita D. Bhappu, Jennifer Brown, Kimberlee K. Kovach & Andrea Kupfer Schneider, "You've Got Agreement: Negotiation via Email," in Christopher Honeyman, James Coben & Giuseppe de Palo eds., Rethinking Negotiation Teaching (2009). Copyright © 2009 by Noam Ebner, Anita D. Bhappu, Jennifer Brown, Kimberlee K. Kovach, and Andrea Kupfer Schneider. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Fisher, Roger, Elizabeth Kopelman & Andrea Kupfer Schneider, Beyond Machiavelli: Tools for Coping with Conflict. Copyright © 1994 by the President and Fellows of Harvard College. Reprinted by permission of Harvard University Press. All rights reserved.
- Fisher, Roger, William Ury & Bruce Patton, Getting to Yes (2d ed., 1991). Copyright © 1981, 1991 by Roger Fisher and William Ury. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Harcourt. All rights reserved.
- Follett, Mary Parker, "Constructive Conflict" in Pauline Graham, ed., Prophet of Management (1996). Copyright © 1996 by Harvard Business School Publishing. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Friedman, Gary, & Jack Himmelstein, The Loop of Understanding (2004). Copyright © 2004 by the American Bar Association. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Fuller, Lon, "Collective Bargaining and the Arbitrator's Role," Proceedings of the 15th Annual Meeting National Academy of Arbitrators (1962). Copyright © 1962 by the Bureau of National Affairs, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, "The Forms and Limits of Adjudication," in Kenneth Winston and Lon L. Fuller, eds., The Principles of Social Order: Selected Essays of Lon L. Fuller (revised ed., 2001). Copyright © 2001 by Bloomsbury Publishing. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, "Mediation: Its Forms and Its Functions," 44 S. Cal. L. Rev. 305-339 (1971). Copyright © 1971 by the Southern California Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Gifford, Donald, "A Context-Based Theory of Strategy Selection in Legal Negotiation," 46 Ohio St. L.J. 41 (1985). Copyright © 1985 by the Ohio State Law Journal. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Golann, Dwight, & Eric Van Loon, "Legal Issues in Consensus Building" in Lawrence Susskind, Sarah McKearnan & Jennifer Thomas-Larmer, eds., The Consensus Building Handbook (1999). Copyright © 1999 by Sage Publications, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Grillo, Trina, "The Mediation Alternative: Process Dangers for Women," 100 Yale L.J. 1545 (1991). Copyright © 1991 by the Yale Law Journal Company. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Harter, Philip, "Negotiating Regulations: A Cure for Malaise," 71 Geo. L.J. 1 (1982). Copyright © 1982 by the Georgetown Law Journal. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Hensler, Deborah, "A Glass Half Full, A Glass Half Empty: The Use of Alternative Dispute Resolution in Mass Personal Injury Litigation," 74 Tex. L. Rev. 1587. Copyright © 1985 by Texas Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Hinshaw, Art, Peter Reilly & Andrea Kupfer Schneider, "Attorneys and Negotiation Ethics: A Material Misunderstanding?," 29 Negot. J. 265 (2013). Copyright © 2013 by Art Hinshaw, Peter Reilly, and Andrea Kupfer Schneider. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Hollander-Blumoff, Rebecca, & Tom R. Tyler, "Procedural Justice in Negotiation: Procedural Fairness, Acceptance, and Integrative Potential," 33 Law & Soc. Inquiry 473. Copyright © 2008 by John Wiley & Sons. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Korobkin, Russell, "A Positive Theory of Legal Negotiation," 88 Geo. L.J. 1789 (2000). Copyright © 2000 by the Georgetown Law Journal. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Krieger Stefan H., & Richard K. Neumann, Jr., Essential Lawyering Skills: Interviewing, Counseling, Negotiation, and Persuasive Fact Analysis (5th ed., 2015). Copyright © 2015 by Stefan H. Krieger and Richard K. Neumann, Jr. Reprinted by permission of Wolters Kluwer Legal & Regulatory. All rights reserved.

- Kruse, Katherine R., "Beyond Cardboard Clients in Legal Ethics," 23 Geo. J. Legal Ethics 1 (2010). Copyright © 2010 by the Georgetown Journal of Legal Ethics. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Lehman, Warren, "The Pursuit of a Client's Interest," 77 Mich. L. Rev. 1078. Copyright © 1979 by the Michigan Law Review Association. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Levin, Murray, "The Propriety of Evaluative Mediation: Concerns about the Nature and Quality of an Evaluative Opinion," 16 Ohio St. J. on Disp. Resol. 267 (2001). Copyright © 2001 by Murray Levin and the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Love, Lela P., "Glen Cove: Mediation Achieves What Litigation Cannot," Consensus (October 1993). Copyright © 1993 by the MIT-Harvard Public Disputes Program. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- , "Images of Justice," 1 Pepp. Disp. Resol. J. 29 (2000). Copyright © 2000 by the Pepperdine Dispute Resolution Journal. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- , "Training Mediators to Listen: Deconstructing Dialogue and Constructing Understanding, Agendas, and Agreements," 38 Fam. & Conciliation Cts. Rev. 27 (2000). Copyright © 2000 by Sage Publications, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Love, Lela P., & Joseph Stulberg, "Targets and Techniques to Generate Movement" in Training Materials (2004). Copyright © 2004 by Lela Love and Joseph Stulberg. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Macfarlane, Julie, The New Lawyer (2008). Copyright © 2008 by UBC Press. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Malin, Martin H., "Two Models of Interest Arbitration," 28 Ohio St. J. on Disp. Resol. 145 (2013). Copyright © 2013 by the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- McAdoo, Bobbi, Nancy A. Welsh & Roselle L. Wissler, "Institutionalization: What Do Empirical Studies Tell Us About Court Mediation?," Disp. Resol. Mag. 8 (Winter 2003). Copyright © 2003 by the American Bar Association. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- McGovern, Francis, "Toward a Functional Approach for Making Complex Litigation," 53 U. Chi. L. Rev. 440. Copyright © 1986 by the University of Chicago Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Menkel-Meadow, Carrie, "Aha? Is Creativity Possible in Legal Problem Solving and Teachable in Legal Education?," 6 Harv. Negot. L. Rev. 97. Copyright © 2001 by the Harvard Negotiation Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- , "Are Cross Cultural Ethics Standards Possible or Desirable in International Arbitration?" in Franz Werro, Pascal Pichonnaz & Peter Gauch eds., Mélanges en l'honneur de Pierre Tervier (2008). Copyright © 2008 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted with permission. All rights reserved.
- , "Conflict Theory" in Karen Christensen & David Levinson, eds., Encyclopedia of Community, Vol. 1 (2003). Copyright © 2003 by Sage Publications, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- , "Dispute Resolution" in Peter Cane & Herbert Kritzer eds., Oxford Handbook of Empirical Legal Research (2010). Copyright © 2010 by Oxford University Press. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- , "Ethics in Alternative Dispute Resolution: New Issues, No Answers from the Adversary Conception of Lawyers' Responsibilities," 38 S. Tex. L. Rev. 407, 409-410 (1997). Copyright © 1997 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- , "Ethics Issues in Arbitration and Related Dispute Resolution Processes: What's Happening and What's Not," 56 Miami L. Rev. 949 (2002). Copyright © 2002 by the Miami Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

- _____, “Ethics, Morality and Professional Responsibility” in Phyllis Bernard and Bryant Garth, Dispute Resolution Ethics: A Comprehensive Guide (2002). Copyright © 2002 by the American Bar Association. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, “For and Against Settlement: The Uses and Abuses of the Mandatory Settlement Conference,” 33 UCLA L. Rev. 485 (1985). Copyright © 1985 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, “The Lawyer’s Role(s) in Deliberative Democracy,” 5 Nev. L.J. 347 (2005). Copyright © 2005 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, Mediation (2000). Copyright © 2000 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, Modes of Conflict Resolution (chart), from Carrie Menkel-Meadow, “Introduction: From Legal Disputes to Conflict Resolution and Human Problem Solving” in Dispute Processing and Conflict Resolution (2003). Copyright © 2003 by Ashgate Publishing, Limited. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, “Mothers and Fathers of Invention: The Intellectual Founders of ADR,” 16 Ohio St. J. on Disp. Resol. 1 (2000). Copyright © 2000 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission of Carrie Menkel-Meadow and the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. All rights reserved.
- _____, “Peace and Justice: Notes on the Evolution and Purposes of Legal Processes,” 94 Geo. L.J. 553 (2006). Copyright © 2006 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, “Practicing ‘In the Interests of Justice’ in the Twenty-First Century: Pursuing Peace and Justice,” 70 Fordham L. Rev. 1761. Copyright © 2002 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, “Pursuing Settlement in an Adversary Culture: A Tale of Innovation Co-Opted or ‘The Law of ADR,’” 19 Fla. St. U. L. Rev. 1 (1991). Copyright © 1991 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, “Toward Another View of Legal Negotiation: The Structure of Problem Solving,” 31 UCLA L. Rev. 754 (1984). Copyright © 1984 by Carrie Menkel-Meadow. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, “The Trouble with the Adversary System in a Postmodern, Multicultural World,” 38 Wm. & Mary L. Rev. 5 (2000). Copyright © 2000 by the William and Mary Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, “Whose Dispute Is It Anyway? A Philosophical and Democratic Defense of Settlement (In Some Cases),” 83 Geo. L.J. 2663 (1995). Copyright © 1995 by Georgetown Law Journal. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Menkel-Meadow, Carrie, & Michael Wheeler, What’s Fair? Ethics for Negotiators (2004). Copyright © 2004 by Jossey-Bass, Inc. Reprinted by permission of John Wiley & Sons, Inc. All rights reserved.
- Moffitt, Michael, “Ten Ways to Get Sued,” 8 Harv. Negot. L. Rev. 81 (2003). Copyright © 2003 by Harvard Negotiation Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Moffitt, Michael, “Pleadings in the Age of Settlement,” 80 Ind. L.J. 727 (2005). Copyright © 2005 by Michael Moffitt. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Moffitt, Michael, & Andrea Kupfer Schneider, Dispute Resolution: Examples & Explanations (3d ed., 2014). Copyright © 2014 by Michael Moffitt and Andrea Schneider. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Moffitt, Michael, “Three Things to be Against (‘Settlement’ Not Included),” 78 Fordham L. Rev. 1203 (2009). Copyright © 2009 by Michael Moffitt. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Moore, Christopher, Sphere of Conflict—Causes and Interventions (chart), from Christopher Moore, The Mediation Process (1986). Copyright © 1986 by Jossey-Bass, Inc. Reprinted by permission of John Wiley & Sons, Inc. All rights reserved.

- Peppet, Scott R., “Contract Formation in Imperfect Markets: Should We Use Mediators in Deals?,” 19 Ohio St. J. on Disp. Resol. 283 (2004). Copyright © 2004 by Scott R. Peppet and the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Price, Marty, “Personalizing Crime: Mediation Produces Restorative Justice for Victims and Offenders,” 7 Disp. Resol. Mag. 1 (2000). Copyright © 2000 by the American Bar Association. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Pruitt, Dean, “Achieving Integrative Agreements” in Max Bazerman & Roy Lewicki, eds., Negotiating in Organizations (1983). Copyright © 1983 by Sage Publications, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Reilly, Peter, “Was Machiavelli Right? Lying in Negotiation and the Art of Defensive Self-Help,” 24 Ohio St. J. on Disp. Resol. 3 (2009). Copyright © 2009 by the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Reuben, Richard C., “Confidentiality in Arbitration: Beyond the Myth,” 54 Kan. L. Rev. 1255 (2006). Copyright © 2006 by Kansas Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Riskin, Leonard L., “Mediation and Lawyers,” 43 Ohio St. L.J. 29 (1982). Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- , “Mediator Orientations, Strategies and Techniques,” 12 Alternatives to the High Cost Litig. 111 (1994). Copyright © 1994 by the CPR Institute for Dispute Resolution. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Rubin, Jeffrey Z. & Frank E.A. Sander, “When Should We Use Agents? Direct vs. Representative Negotiation,” 4 Negot. J. 395 (1988). Copyright © 1988 by John Wiley & Sons, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Rubin, Jeffrey Z. & Frank E.A. Sander, “Culture, Negotiation, and the Eye of the Beholder,” 7 Neg. J. 249 (1991). Copyright © 1991 by John Wiley & Sons, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Sander, Frank E.A., “Varieties of Dispute Processing,” 70 FR.D. 111 (1976). Copyright © 1976 by Frank E.A. Sander. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Sander, Frank E. A., & Stephen Goldberg, “Fitting the Forum to the Fuss: A User-Friendly Guide to Selecting an ADR Procedure,” 10 Negot. J. 49 (1994). Copyright © 1994 by John Wiley & Sons, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Scardilli, Frank J., “Sisters of the Precious Blood v. Bristol-Myers Co.: A Shareholder-Management Dispute,” Harvard Faculty Seminar on Negotiation (April 13, 1982). Copyright © 1982 by Frank J. Scardilli. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Schlit, Patrick J., “On Being a Happy, Healthy and Ethical Member of an Unhappy, Unhealthy, and Unethical Profession,” 52 Vanderbilt L. Rev. 871 (1999). Copyright © 1999 by the Vanderbilt Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Schmitz, Amy, “Untangling the Privacy Paradox in Arbitration,” 54 Kan. L. Rev. 1211 (2006). Copyright © 2006 by Kansas Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Schneider, Andrea Kupfer, “Building a Pedagogy of Problem-Solving: Learning to Choose Among ADR Processes,” 5 Harv. Negot. L. Rev. 113 (2000). Copyright © 2000 by Andrea Kupfer Schneider. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Schneider, Andrea Kupfer, “Shattering Negotiation Myths: Empirical Evidence on the Effectiveness of Negotiation Style,” 7 Harv. Negot. L. Rev. 143, 171-175 (2002). Copyright © 2002 by Andrea Kupfer Schneider. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Schneider, Andrea Kupfer & David Kupfer, Smart & Savvy: Negotiation Strategies in Academia (2017). Copyright © 2017 by Andrea Kupfer Schneider and David Kupfer. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Schneider, Andrea Kupfer & Noam Ebner, “Social Intuition” in Chris Honeyman & Andrea Kupfer Schneider, The Negotiator’s Desk Reference (2017). Copyright © 2017 by Andrea Kupfer Schneider and Noam Ember. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

- Sebenius, James K., "Mapping Backward: Negotiating in the Right Sequence?," Negot. (June 2004), reprinted as "A Better Way to Negotiate: Backward," in Harvard Business School Working Knowledge (July 26, 2004). Copyright © 2004 by Harvard Business Publishing. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Shapiro, Martin, Courts: A Comparative and Political Analysis (1981). Copyright © 1981 by Pearson Education, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Shell, G. Richard, Bargaining for Advantage: Negotiation Strategies for Reasonable People (1999). Copyright © 1999 by G. Richard Shell. Reprinted by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Random House. All rights reserved.
- Sternlight, Jean R., "ADR Is Here: Preliminary Reflections on Where It Fits in a System of Justice," 3 Nev. L. Rev. 289 (2002/2003). Copyright © 2003 by Nevada Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, "Lawyerless Dispute Resolution: Rethinking a Paradigm," 37 Fordham Urban L.J. 1 (2010). Copyright © 2010 by Fordham Urban Law Journal. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, "Lawyers' Representation of Clients in Mediation: Using Economics and Psychology to Structure Advocacy in a Nonadversarial Setting," 14 Ohio St. J. on Dispute Resol. 269 (1999). Copyright © 1999 by Jean R. Sternlight and the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Sternlight, Jean R., & Jennifer Robbennolt, "Good Lawyers Should Be Good Psychologists: Insights for Interviewing and Counseling Clients," 23 Ohio St. J. on Dispute Resol. 437 (2008). Copyright © 2008 by Jean R. Sternlight, Jennifer Robbennolt, and the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Stone, Douglas, Bruce Patton & Sheila Heen, Difficult Conversations: How to Discuss What Matters Most (1999). Copyright © 1999 by Douglas Stone, Bruce M. Patton, and Sheila Heen. Reprinted by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Random House, and International Creative Management (ICM). All rights reserved.
- Stulberg, Joseph B., "The Theory and Practice of Mediation: A Reply to Professor Susskind," 6 Vt. L. Rev. 85 (1981). Copyright © 1981 by the Vermont Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Stulberg, Joseph B., & Lela P. Love, The Middle Voice: Mediating Conflict Successfully (2d ed., 2013). Copyright © 2009, 2013 by Carolina Academic Press. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Sunstein, Cass, "Deliberative Trouble? Why Groups Go to Extremes," 110 Yale L.J. 71 (2000). Copyright © 2000 by the Yale Law Journal Company. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Susskind, Lawrence, "An Alternative to Robert's Rules of Order for Groups, Organizations," and "Ad Hoc Assemblies that Want to Operate by Consensus," in Lawrence Susskind, Sarah McKernan & Jennifer Thomas-Larmer, eds., The Consensus Building Handbook (1999). Copyright (1999) by Sage Publications, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- _____, "Environmental Mediation and the Accountability Problem," 6 Vt. L. Rev. 1 (1981). Copyright © 1981 by the Vermont Law Review. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Thompson, Leigh, The Mind and Heart of the Negotiator (2nd ed., 2001). Copyright © 2001 by Pearson Education, Inc. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.
- Ury, William, Stephen Goldberg & Jeanne Brett, Getting Disputes Resolved: Designing Systems to Cut the Costs of Conflict (1988). Copyright © 1988 by William Ury, Stephen Goldberg, Jeanne Brett. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

DISPUTE RESOLUTION

INTRODUCTION

Chapter 1

Introducing the Fields of Conflict and Dispute Resolution

The skillful management of conflicts, [is] among the highest of human skills.

— Stuart Hampshire, Justice Is Conflict 35 (2000)

The core mission of the legal profession is the pursuit of justice, through the resolution of conflict or the orderly and civilized righting of wrongs.

— Howard Gardner, Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi & William Damon,
Good Work: When Excellence and Ethics Meet 10 (2001)

Conflicts among human beings are as old as life itself. From the time we began to work and socialize with other people we have had to learn how to resolve conflicts. Using approaches ranging from negotiation to violence we have, in some eras, been more successful than in others in resolving our conflicts effectively and productively. Indeed, our degree of success in dealing with the conflicts inevitable to human interdependence is one mark of our success (or not) in achieving an advanced civilization.

In striving to deal with our differences, we often have focused on trying to establish fair processes to resolve these differences. Stuart Hampshire, the philosopher quoted above, has suggested that while we will never reach agreement about the substantive good in our culturally and politically diverse world, we can come close to achieving a human universal value by committing to “procedural fairness.” Thus we have developed law, legal institutions, and other procedural mechanisms to try to regulate our conflicts or potential conflicts with one another. Both substantive law and legal processes are modes of conflict resolution. These processes include judicial, legislative, and executive entities. But it is also important to recognize that law and traditional legal institutions are not the only viable means for resolving human problems.

Because you are in law school, it probably now seems commonplace for you to think of all human problems as having a “legal” solution. Yet many problems, even when strictly legal, never go further than the lawyer’s office. Instead, negotiation and drafting are used to resolve many problems, both small and complex, even when the disputes are bitterly contested. Sometimes such disputes are resolved in noncourt settings, such as employee grievance systems, internal ombuds or complaint services, with privately contracted dispute resolution professionals, community action organizations or these days, perhaps with an online customer service process. Even after a case has been filed with a court, the parties sometimes voluntarily choose some other means of dispute settlement or are assigned to one of the newer forms of dispute resolution you will study in this book. In addition, as both transactions and disputes increasingly transcend national boundaries, processes other than one nation's legal system may be needed to structure relationships and solve problems involving multiple parties of different legal systems. That is, the field of dispute resolution or alternative or "appropriate" dispute resolution (ADR) in law has grown out of recognition that the conventional legal systems of legislative enactments, litigation practices, trials, and court decisions are not always adequate to deal with all kinds of human problems.

This book uses the theory of "process pluralism" to explain why different kinds of matters may require different kinds of procedures or ways of dealing with the underlying conflict. If trial-by-court is an evolved form as compared to the trial-by-ordeal or trial-by-combat of medieval days, then our newer forms of dispute resolution may be thought of as an evolutionary improvement over trial-by-court. Recent empirical research has documented that, for many people, being treated fairly, by being heard and acknowledged, may be as important as achieving a good result or "winning" a dispute, known as the measure of "procedural justice," as distinguished from substantive justice.

Although not all disputes are legal, and not all legal disputes have to be "tried" in order to be resolved, lawyers play a key role in helping to resolve a broad array of conflicts in our society. To be effective in this role, you will need to expand your knowledge base and behavioral repertoires. That's why this book is called "beyond the adversarial model." This book presents a particular point of view that human relationships and well-being are improved by a greater number of choices about how to resolve human problems and that some choices are better than others in particular cases. Usually (though not always) the maximum participation of parties in the decisions that affect their lives should be an essential part of any choice about how decisions should be made. While the adversary process has its place, modern life, with multiple parties and multiple issues present in almost every human endeavor, may not fit so easily in the casebook headings where often only one name appears on either side of the "v." Your job as a well-educated lawyer and citizen is to know about and assist others in making choices about what process is best for the particular matter at hand. In recent years you have likely witnessed the failure of these processes at the international and national level as the United States has been engaged in a variety of armed conflicts (e.g., Afghanistan, Iraq) and has had more bellicose relations with some nations (North Korea and Iran), even while attempting diplomatic negotiations. The larger culture and changes over time often affect not only how nations and governments conduct themselves, but also how lawyers, clients, and ordinary citizens decide what processes to use.¹ But even war has its "rules" (jus in bello)²; and many new international organizations (e.g. United Nations; treaty monitoring committees) and processes (e.g., international mediation, fact-finding inquiries) now try to promote a variety of dispute prevention, avoidance, management, and resolution efforts.

1. Carrie Menkel-Meadow, The Historical Contingencies of Conflict Resolution, 1(1) Intl J. of Conflict Resol. 32-55 (2013).

2. E.g., Geneva Conventions for Protections of War Victims (1949).

To perform well in your job of assisting with process choices, you need to “think outside of the box,” to be aware of many alternative modes of conflict resolution, and to communicate and consult well with your clients. In each chapter we will offer problems for you to solve (which, ironically, will sometimes appear “inside the box” to demarcate the problems from the text). Thus, this book exposes you to more varied forms of human problem solving (including negotiation, mediation, arbitration, and variants of these).

This book is organized to help you move from the simpler forms of conflict and dispute resolution to the more complex. This first chapter introduces some key concepts that describe the frameworks or theories human beings have developed to understand themselves and how they interact with each other, the history of these concepts, and the institutions and practices that have been built around them. The second chapter will introduce the key skills needed to solve problems for clients, including interviewing clients about their needs and goals, and counseling them about available processes and potential outcomes. Subsequent sections of this book then examine particular forms of dispute resolution. The focus initially is on the three foundational processes, other than litigation, that are most frequently used to resolve disputes in the United States and most parts of the world: negotiation, mediation, and arbitration. Later chapters explore the infinite possibilities of dispute resolution in our complex world. The chapter on hybrid processes shows how we can creatively combine aspects of negotiation, mediation, arbitration, and even adjudication to form other processes that may better serve the needs of disputants or society in particular situations. Next you will examine particular processes that are used to deal with multiparty disputes, conflicts arising in the transactional context and developing systems of dispute resolution. Finally, we conclude with a few words about the future and potential of different means of dispute resolution.

As the book presents these various processes, it elaborates the theories, frameworks, models, concepts, and basic premises of a particular process; examines each process’s internal or institutional structures; describes the skills and practices involved in each process; and explores the policies, ethics, and issues or dilemmas challenging the use of each particular process.

This book focuses on theory of process, with the hope that such a grounding will serve you in counseling clients, making and affecting policy and law, and structuring your own professional (and personal) life. In particular, the book is conceptualized to present “theories-in-use,” as Donald Schön of MIT has defined that phrase in The Reflective Practitioner (1983). To practice good dispute resolution and problem solving, we need to have theories to inform our actions and assist the choices we make about what process is appropriate for a particular human problem. At the same time, our theories should be useful, so we should constantly test the assumptions on which we base our actions and correct them if they do not serve us well. If what we are doing cannot be understood or adequately explained, we need to refine our theories and practices.

To explore the theoretical underpinnings of process pluralism, this text looks to law and other disciplines, drawing at times from such fields as economics, game theory, political science, psychology, sociology, anthropology, philosophy, sociolegal studies, peace studies, communication, and urban planning and public policy studies.

As globalization increases our contacts with others — individuals, groups, organizations, nation-states, and cultures — we can see both the existence of other forms of conflict resolution embedded in other legal systems and cultures and the need for different forms to deal with our many human problems and interactions, in varied regional and worldwide interdependent political, economic, and legal regimes. Perhaps you will develop your own new form of dispute resolution or process for some human, social, or legal problem we have yet to confront.

A. THEORETICAL UNDERPINNINGS OF CONFLICT AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Although law school focuses on disputes or cases, the disputes that make it into casebooks represent the tip of the iceberg of all the kinds of conflicts that people have. Lawyers are often called on not only to bring or defend lawsuits, but also to help prevent conflicts from arising or to deal with disputes other than in court. Thus it is useful for lawyers to have a broad understanding of the types of conflicts that may exist. Scholars in a wide variety of the social sciences have attempted to define and develop taxonomies of different kinds of conflicts so as to better understand the different possible treatments or interventions available in conflict settings. At the same time, it is important to realize that not all conflict is bad or ought to be avoided. Carrie Menkel-Meadow explores these multiple aspects of conflict.

Carrie Menkel-Meadow, CONFLICT THEORY

in Encyclopedia of Community: From the Village to the Virtual World
323-326 (Karen Christensen & David Levinson eds., 2003)

There are many reasons for conflicts to develop, at both the individual and at the group level. Some conflicts are based on belief systems or principles, some are based on personality differences, and others on conflicts about material goods or personal or group status or reputation. Because there are so many different reasons conflicts develop and because much conflict is dangerous and unproductive, the theory of conflict attempts to understand the different sources of conflict, the dynamics of how conflict develops, escalates or declines and how conflict can be managed, reduced or resolved.

At the same time, it must be recognized that conflict can have social utility as well. Many important changes in human society, many for the betterment of human life, have come from hard-fought conflicts that resulted in the change of human institutions, relationships or ideas. The United States Civil War, for example, was a bloody and painful war in which over a million Americans died, but this war eliminated slavery in the United States and ushered in a long period of change in race relations. . . . Even small interpersonal conflicts (like between a husband and wife or parent and child) can lead to important changes, not only in relationships between the people in conflict, but in larger social movements, such as the women's rights or feminist movement and the children's rights movement. Conflicts with outsiders often clarify and reinforce commitments and norms of one's own group. And internal conflict within the individual can lead to changed views and intellectual and emotional growth.

Conflict theory tries to explain the types of conflicts that exist and whether they are productive or destructive and then goes on to attempt to explain the ways in which conflict proceeds or is structured . . . and how it can be managed or resolved.

A conflict can be experienced as a simple disagreement, a feeling of discomfort or opposition, and a perception of difference from others, or a competition or incompatibility with others. Conflicts, then, can be perceptual, emotional or behavioral. When a conflict is actually acted on it becomes a dispute with someone or a group of others. In order for a conflict to fully develop into a dispute we have to experience some sense of wrong to ourselves, someone else to "blame" for that wrong and some way to take action against those we think caused our difficulty — what one set of scholars have called, "naming, blaming and claiming."³ How the conflict turns into a dispute and how it is labeled ("framing") then may affect how it progresses and how it may either escalate and get worse, leading in extreme cases to war, or how it can be handled, managed or resolved.

TYPES OF CONFLICTS

Conflict can exist on many different levels, including the intrapersonal, interpersonal, intragroup, intergroup, and international. Conflicts can exist about different subject matters — ideational or beliefs, values, materiel and resources, emotions, roles and responsibilities. Conflicts vary in terms of the social contexts in which they are located (two old friends, family members, neighbors, strangers, consumers and merchants, distant nation-states) and in the time span in which they are located ("one-off" or "one-shot" encounters and conflicts, long-standing or "embedded" conflicts, temporary or "repeated" conflicts in on-going relationships like families and employment settings). Conflicts vary, even within the same social environment or subject matter by how the disputants treat the conflict, in the strategies, tactics and behaviors they employ (avoidance, self-help, peaceful negotiation, argument, escalation, physical violence, peace seeking, mediation or settlement) and how the strategies chosen interact with each other. And conflicts are often classified by how they affect the parties in the conflict (the consequences of the conflict) and those outside of the conflict (the "externalities" of the conflict, like children in a marital argument or divorce and neighbors of warring states who accept refugees). . . .

3. William L.F. Felstiner, Richard Abel & Austin Sarat, The Emergence and Transformation of Disputes: Naming, Blaming and Claiming . . . , 15 L. & Socy. Rev. 631-654 (1980-1981).